IN THE HIGHLANDS.

Dr Fleming Writes of Fertile Lands, Fair Scenes, and Fat Cattle

Dr. Fleming, who has been spending several weeks in Highland county and the mountain sections of West Virginia adjacent, writes the following interesting account of that fair and fertile country, which is a sequel to a former letter published a few weeks ago:

Above Marlinton the valley is narrow. The mountains, like sentinels, guard the winding stream. At every station there is evidence of new life that is pulsing in this new, yet old, country. "Case" is the seat of one of the largest lumber mills in the State. From the summit of Cheat mountain the logs are brought by rail. At Durbin, where the east and west branches of the Greenbrier mingle their waters, the Coal and Iron road goes on to Ekins and to the great centres of industry. My route was eastward. Leaving the railroad at Bartow, where a thriving village occupies the spot where the cannon of the Federal belched forth their iron hail during the battle of Greenbrier river a comfortable stage with an accommodating driver brought me across the huge Alleghany.

It is interesting to note that the name and fame of Colonel Crozet is connected with the fine road known in former days as the Staunton and Parkersburg Turnpike, and also with the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad, the present great thoroughfare to the West. As one climbs the mountain at an easy grade, he is full of admiration for the genius and skill of this great engineer. After fifty well drained and serviceable.

Vistas of scenery as grand as any in the land burst upon the view. On the broad top near where now stands a pretty church, a battle was fought. Here General Edward Johnson won immortal fame. For many miles the road winds through farms and over ridges where the hemlock, with its dark foliage, casts its shadows. Just over the way is seen the puff of smoke, which indicates the course of the railroad which is hauling away these monarchs of the forest.

There is no better time to come in view of the blue grass valley of Crab Bottom, in Highland county, than late in the summer afternoon. The sun seems to linger on the mountain top. Dark shadows are beginning to creep across the valley. The herds of fine cattle are lazily cropping the luscious blue grass. The sweet odors from freshly mown meadows fill the dustless air. Ten miles or more to the left the valley smiles peacefully. The springs which form the south branch of the Potomac gush sparkling from the hills. And as far on the right are the streams which are to lose their sparkle in the muddy waters of the James. Nestling in happy seclusion are the white farm houses all the more picturesque because of the grassy lawns which are about them.

It is said that the blue grass which has made Kentucky famous came from Highland county; that a traveler over the western trail in early days stopped to eat his lunch in Crab Bottom; seeing how eagerly his horse ate the grass, he put in his saddle bags a piece of turf and carried it to his home in Kentucky. I am told that the grass crop which is the main one here, was never so abundant as it is this year; that cattle were never fiercer. I looked at a herd of Herefords yesterday; cows with beautiful calves. These cows will weigh from 1,500 to 2,000 pounds.

From the farm, "The Maple," where I write, some cattle went away to market a few days ago which averaged nearly 1,400 pounds. And they never ate a pound of grain! Since the southeast storm, the fringe of which touched this high land, the nights have been cool. The days are warm; just warm enough. In the shade of a great maple this letter is written. Reluctantly I must turn my face away in a few days. But when I think of Lynchburg and the friends whom I love there, there is no regret.

—Lynchburg News. (Continued from page 1.) calling them a very low grade of towards rallied them and returned to the fight, fighting them as though he thought of whipping the federal army with his pickets. When the Federals came in range of the Confederate batteries they opened on them a live-fire. The Federals succeeded in placing a battery in the Burner orchard in the bottom and another near the old Burner barn on the hill, and also began a lively fire on the Confederate position. In addition to their batteries, the Federals also lined up a considerable force of infantry along the base of the mountain opposite the Confederate position, extending their line to the upper end of the bottom. In this position the artillery dual was kept up for three long hours without any appreciable advantage on either side.

For the most part the firing was wild and exciting. The range was from four to six hundred yards, and, at that distance, the Confederate batteries, firing from embraures, as they did, should have rendered the Federal position untenable in a very short time. Aside from the picket fight, the musketry firing was desultory and at long range. About 2 o'clock the Federals began to fall back to their camp on Cheat mountain; Gen. Johnson permitting them to retire without molestation. On the Confederate side, Co. G, of the 31st Regiment lost the late W. W. Slaton dangerously wounded and Philip Wolf the remains of a man were found in a ravine a short distance from where the pickets made their last stand which was supposed to have been that of Philip Wolf.

Capt. Dangerfield, of the cavalry, was wounded and lost a foot by the explosion of a shell. To the best of the writer's recollection, there was no other loss on the Confederate side. As to the Federal loss, we never had any information, but have always supposed that it was small.

On Saturday evening, August the 28th, just as the last rays of the setting sun were gilding the tombstones of Oak Grove Cemetery, the remains of our esteemed townsman, John O. Campbell, were laid to rest in the presence of a large concourse of sorrowing friends and relatives. The pall bearers were Modern Woodmen and the interment ceremonies conducted by them as Mr. Campbell was a member of that order. Mr. Campbell died at the hospital in Marlinton on Friday evening, August the 28th, from injuries received from falling from a railway speeder. He was born and reared at Gap Mills, Monroe county, and was aged 48 years and 18 days. He is survived by a wife and 5 children two sons and three daughters. He brought property and lived in our town about 4 years during which time he proved his worth as an upright and honorable man. A man whose sunny disposition and unselfish life won for him the esteem of all who knew him. Honesty and generosity were cardinal principles of his character. His big, generous heart would not permit him to refuse a favor to anyone. We do not think he had an enemy, and his death pathetically touched the whole community. We extend to the bereaved family, those who were near to him and whose hearts have been saddened by the sundering of sweet ties and tender associations our heartfelt sympathy. He who shapes and rules the destinies of all men and nations, will wipe away all tears and bring about a glorious reunion in the beautiful land beyond.

Mr. "Doc" Sheets and Miss Rachel Beard will be united in marriage by the Rev. J. C. Johnson, at the residence of Alex McNeil on next Wednesday the 9th. We extend our congratulations and wish them smooth sailing on life's tempestuous sea.

S. J. Payne of this place has secured the contract and will put in a dam on Bruffey's Creek for $1500.

The Rev. Hiram Sydenstricker, brother of Dr. D. S. Sydenstricker of this place and who is engaged in evangelistic work, delivered a series of interesting sermons here last week. His able and earnest preaching has set the people to thinking and he has been the means of accomplishing much good here.

Corn cutting has commenced and the crop is excellent. In fact this has been a good and bountiful season for all products of the farm in our section.

Misses Nellie Matheny and Clara Overholt, of Covington, Va., are visiting H. A. Overholt also Mr. and Mrs. Henry Sharp, of Douthards Creek.

Died, in the city of Baltimore, on Sept. 2nd, of a chronic heart disease, —Helen, youngest of seven children of the widowed mother, Mrs. Cornelia Bennett, who spent a summer in Marlinton some years ago. Thro' many months of acute suffering, we seem to hear this dear christian girl saying to the Angels, —

"I want to put on my attire, Washed white in the blood of the Lamb, I want to be one of your choir, And tune my soft harp to His home: I want—O I want to be there, Where sorrow and sin bid adieu, Your joy and your friendship to share. To wonder and worship with you!" A. L. P.
